Google Summer of Code student Maxime Simon (who was interviewd here at ICO last month) wrote earlier today a progress report on his project, including a couple of screenshots.

According to Maxime (and to a comment posted by him to his own report), he has now managed to build not only JavaScriptCore but the WebCore itself. Lots of more work is to be done by himself and Ryan but this is awesome work by the two already. Can't wait to see the final result. Who am I kidding? I can't wait to see the alpha result :)
